Politics in Caroline.

BOWLING GREEN, VA., May 8.—Special.—To-day was our county court day. Little business, however, was done in court. The session continues to-morrow.

for the trial of a case postponed. I think from last court. Though the case was sort of inert in the court-room, the tide of political feeling was very high—unusually high for a county election. The fight for the clerkship now waging is one of the hottest we have ever had in this county. Mr. W. J. Anderson, who represented our county in the Legislature some years ago, and Mr. E. K. Cogbill are the candidates.

TROOPS AT BROOK HAVEN.

The Sheriff Fears an Attack on the Jail That Contained the White-Caps.

BROOK HAVEN, MICH., May 8.—Sheriff McNair to-day sent the following telegram to Governor Stone:

"To fear a serious attack on the jail to-night. I think it is best for you to send aid—say two companies."

Governor Stone acted promptly, and in a few hours' time the militia companies of Crystal Springs and Hazlehurst arrived and reported to the sheriff for duty.

The two companies numbered sixty and eighty men. The militia at once established quarters at a two-story school-house near the court-yard, and were assigned to duty about the court-house and jail. Every approach is strongly picketed. It is believed that the white-caps will make a move to break the white caps and their sympathizers, who are, however, in a very ugly mood. Adjutant-General Henry is in command of the soldiers and Governor Stone is here also. An immense crowd gathered at the court-house where the cases of the white-caps were ready to be called. Governor Stone was introduced to the crowd by the Baptist ministers of Brook Haven, and made a short address.

After the adjournment of the court this afternoon the stores were opened and business resumed. Everybody is satisfied with the result of to-day's work. The citizens living in the country have returned to their homes. Some of them are much better citizens than heretofore.

Captain George Hopkins' company was allowed to go to their homes, with the exception of the guard around the jail, which was held out on an alarm.

Everything is quiet now. No danger is feared. Everybody is thankful that the law has been vindicated without bloodshed.

The white caps pleaded guilty and were sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. There was a mass of prisoners broken down completely and wept and begged the judge to show them as much mercy as he could. The wife of one of the white caps held a small baby up to the judge and begged him to spare her husband.

The judge held the baby a moment and soothed its mother, but could not spare the father. The scene in the court-room was most affecting.

Big Fire in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, May 8.—The large four-story mill at Orange and Tacony streets was burned to-night with a loss of $20,000.

Harry Knight, an employee of Caldwell & Antrim, had his skull fractured by jumping from the third story window, and Joseph Taylor, a fireman, was killed by falling walls. The fire was caused by a glue pot boiling over.

Broomeley & Burns' loss is about $150,000, with an insurance of $120,000, and Caldwell & Antrim's loss is about $50,000, insurance $30,000.

Freight Handlers Strike.

MONTREAL, May 8.—All the freight handlers employed by the Grand Trunk Railway Company in this city are out on strike, and the freight business is temporarily paralyzed. The men presented a demand to the management for an increase of wages. The company refused to grant the demand, on the ground that it would be impossible to do so without making a general increase, which was out of the question in the present financial condition of the company. The men are now well organized.

Failure of H. H. Warner.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 8.—H. H. Warner, the patent medicine man, to-day gave up the struggle against adverse fate and fled his general assignment for the benefit of his creditors.

The assignment is in the usual form, and gives, of course, nothing of the amount of either assets or liabilities. Job Hedges, of New York city, is the assignee.

A SCENE OF SPLENDOR.

WORLD'S FAIR BUILDINGS ILLUMINATED WITH ELECTRICITY.

A Spectacle of Electrical Brilliance Probably Never Before Presented to the Human Eye.

WORLD'S FAIR GROUNDS, CHICAGO, ILL., May 8.—The climax in electricity's upward march through the nineteenth century was reached to-night, when the World's Fair buildings and grounds were illuminated in honor of the "first opening" of the Exposition.

The whiteness of the buildings gave added lustre to the rays from the million and more lights in the grand plaza, while the golden statues of the "Republic" and "Diana," upon which the light from the west end of administration plaza poured in blinding splendor, made the scene a whole. The different buildings were illuminated to a certain extent between the administration building on the west and the peristyle in the east, enclosing the grand court of honor, and held the multitude spellbound, easily carried off the honors of the night.

The crowds began to arrive early, all the rail and steamer routes bringing immense numbers. By the time darkness had settled over the White City fully 20,000 people were on the scene, this crowd being augmented later by probably 5,000 more.

The administration building was the first to be electrified, and its beautiful exterior, from the base to the tip of the dome, was gilded with rows of incandescent lights. At the base of its dome thirty-two blazing torches on bronze stands, arranged in a square, radiated light and its circumference, adding much to its splendid appearance. The peristyle soon added its row of lights, and this was the signal for the triple-row of arc lamps along either side of the lagoon to lend their aid, and in an instant they were sending brilliant rays over the water, completing the band encircling the grand plaza. The main lagoon lay under the sheen of the thousands of lights like a great mirror arc, and the peristyle lights formed its gilded frame, and around the sides, about a foot from the water's surface, were incandescent lights, and the beauty of a golden bevel to the splendid plate.

Its surface was dotted here and there with the electric launches and the bright gondolas. Gaily-decked gondolas stood on the stem and stern of their craft, and as their oars dipped silently in the water, the boats were borne away to and from the romantic looking boats, and its oars formed a novel silhouette in the sparkling basin, disappearing a moment later as it passed under the shadow of a bridge. Powerful search lights on top of the Manufactures and Agricultural buildings and the Music Hall brought out new beauties in the scene for the benefit of the spectator.

Golden "Diana," perched on the dome of the Agricultural building, with arrow pointed directly to the Music Hall light, came in for a share of inspection. The three search lights were then, by pre-arrangement, concentrated on the magnificent MacMonies fountain, situated immediately in front of the Administration building. The marble figures were rendered immaculate on the instant, and the glare flung full and powerful upon the handsome women at the oars, and in the seat of honor sent dazzling rays of electricity down and across the silvery lagoon.

When shortly before 10 o'clock the currents were turned off, a sigh went up from the thousands of hearts, and darkness put an end to a scene of splendor such as was probably never before presented to the human eye.

The magnificent terraces and promenades which lead to the grand basin in front of the Administration building were the favorite places for the crowds, chiefly because of the general expectation that the electric fountains would be in operation. But this was the only real disappointment of the evening, and in the splendors was hardly missed.

When Michael Brand's orchestra, from Cincinnati, began to pour forth melody upon the scene of splendor there was a rush of people to the south side of the Music Hall, where the three hours' concert was to be given. A cluster of arc lights. The music rendered was classic, patriotic and popular, including "America."

Twenty-one thousand people bought admission tickets to the World's Fair Grounds up to 6 o'clock this evening. The total ticket sales for the day, however, is estimated at 3,000 to 4,000. A rough guess of the number of paid admission between 6 and 10 P. M. places it at 8,000, making a total of more than 30,000 paid admissions for the day.

THE WHITEMORE TRIAL.

The Argument Concluded—The Llewellyn Murder Case.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., May 8.—Special.—Argument in the Whitmore homicide case was concluded this afternoon. Judge J. H. Merrimon concluding for the defense, and was followed by Solicitor E. D. Carter, who closed for the State. A special venire has been ordered for to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock for the trial of the Llewellyns for the murder of United States Marshal Brooks about two months ago near the Madison county line. This will make the third capital case of this term of our criminal court. Judge Carter looks completely fagged out, and suffers yet somewhat from the wound received last Monday by a fall in his cellar. The speeches delivered by the attorneys in the Whitmore case have been very good.

J. P. Sawyer, W. B. Gwyn, D. T. Millard, H. Redwood and A. A. Nichols, highly elected members of the jury committee of the city of Asheville, were sworn into office by Mayor Blanton at the last meeting of the board of aldermen. The new mayor and his board will qualify next Monday.

Two men from some of the more western counties were convicted of counterfeiting the Federal court last week, and sentenced by Judge Dick to three years and the other to eighteen months in the penitentiary.

"The Ministers' Conference, of Asheville," composed of most of the ministers of this place, an organization designed to promote the good of the town, met last Monday night. The meeting was attended by the mayor-elect, who stated he would gladly listen to and consider suggestions made by them.

It is stated that Colonel Charles Price, District Attorney for the Western district of North Carolina, and M. L. Mott, his assistant, have announced their intention of resigning their posts immediately after the circuit of spring courts is concluded. This will not be until June, however, and the term of the District Attorney expires then anyway.

The internal revenue collections for this district during April aggregated $85,634.63.

A german, complimentary to the Bingham cadets and teachers, was given by Manager McKissick, of the Battery Park Hotel, Saturday morning, and was enjoyed by quite a number of our society people.

This week the commencement exercises of Judson College will occur at Hendersonville. Quite a number of Asheville people will attend.

The Chemical National Bank in the White City Suspends.

CHICAGO, May 8.—The Chemical Bank of this city, which established a branch at Jackson Park, where the World's Fair concessionaries have been depositing their cash, closed its doors to-day.

It is hoped that the assets will satisfy the liabilities, but nothing definite in this respect could be discovered by National Bank Examiner Sturges to-night, who was asked to take charge of the institution.

VIENNA, May 8.—Private advices received here from Brazil indicate that the rebellion in Rio Grande do Sul is more serious than the Government is willing to admit. The rebels are supported by all the better class in the provinces, not excepting the landed proprietors and merchants.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Lieutenant Pursell, of the weather bureau, has asked to be relieved from duty and transferred to his regular home. Secretary Morton declines to consider any request of this kind until the present investigation is concluded. This request grows out of what Lieutenant Pursell calls discourteous conduct on the part of Chief Harrington on account of the Lieutenant's testimony in the investigation. Mr. Harrington was on the stand to-day, for hours, but nothing of importance was given in his testimony.

VAIN SHOTS AT A SPOOK.

Three Horsemen's Experience at the Scene of a Utah Massacre.

A Sullina, Utah, dispatch says: On the night of Saturday last this little city was awakened by the loud clatter of horses' feet through the main street. The nightgown people ran to the windows and recognized the horsemen as Griffin Elliott, Tom Fastfold and Caldwell Johnson, for all three always rode milk-white horses. When a horse belonging to one of them alighted, the riders until he found himself bestirring the like of the dead animal. These three men were of undisputed courage, and no man in the county would have dared offend them or approach any of them with a desire to pick a quarrel with impunity, for there was not only their individual daring, but to insult one was to encounter all three.

Knowing the men, even those not given to frequenting the saloon, the "Hog-eye," to which the three frantic riders had gone, were there that night. This is the tale as related by Caldwell:

"We went hunting this morning, and struck across Wilder Mason's fields, then into the small timber land the river, then we followed that some, then we came to a path of ground which looked as if no axe had ever touched it. There was a great deal of undergrowth and bushes as well, with an abundance of game both big and little, and for the most part the land was very good. We were hunting for a deer, and we were very deer were plentiful, and ran within a few feet of you sometimes when they didn't see you coming, and often and often they'd run clean over our feet when you or they would step from behind a bush. Every now and then, 'bout two or three hours after dark, we'd catch a glimpse of a man 'way in the distance, but he'd never come anywhere near us, and as we wasn't pestering him we didn't look him up. Once or twice Tom, straining his eyes, would say: 'Wonder what is that fellow doing wandering round these woods? For I'm a fool, and a big fool, too, if I've got a gun.'"

"Grif and me'd laugh at the notion of dodging about in that dismal wood 'tout a gun when that warn't nothing else worth looking at. Still it seemed to me that the next time I glimpsed him I couldn't catch a sight of no gun in his hands, I told Griffin to look, and he couldn't see no man either. 'What?' says I, 'no gun nor man?' 'No,' says he, 'staring at the spot where I was pointing to, and when I come to rub my eyes he was gone, too, though it had not been half a second since I looked away. 'It must be a spook, boys,' says I, and we all laughed, but looking round we 'gin to see the fellow was growing on toward dark, and the owls were beginning to hoot in a pretty doleful way."

"Then Tom he says, 'I tell you what, boys, let's have a supper out here. Things kinder taste better when you eat 'em in the wood.' Grif and me didn't care to eat stuff so newly killed, but Tom picked out several 'uns, says he, and killed early in the day, and we soon had roaring fire under a tree, and a pronged stick over it with the cleaned game on it. We sat around it telling stories, when all at once Tom yelled out: 'My God, look at that!' and we saw just between Tom and me and mine a headless Indian, standing clapping his hands, and throwing a way that made you sick."

"I fell back dizzy at the sight and cold as death. But all at once the figure was gone, and there was a woman with a face as if she had been dead for a long time, and in her arms was a child—a little thing about two years old. We huddled up to our feet and every fellow of us grabbed our guns, and we must have fairly riddled that tree around which we chased that Indian. We expected to see that red devil fall dead every moment, but the manner in which he evaded the bullets was the most extraordinary thing I ever see."

"Pretty soon the Indian went away, and the woman, as blind as ever, anybody was with her ever 'fater she shot out of her head, knelt down with the little dead body of her child in her arms, and tried to dig its grave with her blunt and broken fingers. We wanted to help her, but when we went to the spot she was gone, and bimby Elliott whistled to me. 'They ain't no human beings, Caldwell, but they're come back to tell us what we should do for 'em, and that's swep 'em off the air, and we are the ones to help 'em. We've seen to-day only a little work, and I and you and Tom here must be pretty nigh tired of 'em. No, don't repeat their own savage act, but set 'em to work, and that'll kill 'em dead, sure.'"

"Then we went back to where we'd left our horses, and that infernal beast chased us every inch of the way home. First I'd find him on my horse grinning in my face; then I'd see him on one of the others."

When Caldwell finished his story he rose and looked at old Robinson, who smiled and said, "Robinson, my boy, I've known that story for over twenty years, and that's why the town avails the spot of one of the most fearful massacres in history."—Philadelphia Times, March 22th.
